

The Giusti likes Umer plan

By JAMIE THOMPSON
As a result of a study conducted by Dean of Students John Umer, three key areas, formerly under his control, will now report to the Vice-Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Dean of Faculty, R. F. Koworevsky.

Key jobs realigned

The realignment of job responsibilities in Student Services is part of the restructuring aimed at developing funds to meet new needs, said Dean of Students John Umer.

Increased demands in Financial Aid, a new federal guidelines which have broadened student eligibility, have created a need for more personnel. A full-time registered nurse is needed for Health Services, and counseling for disabled students, a position no longer funded by CETA, will need to go on the university payroll.

Edna Havasi, formerly head of Student Developmental Services, spent part of his time in general counseling, said Dean Umer. Havasi's post has not been filled since he left last past summer, for a post at Northeastern College. His administrative duties have now been assumed by Umer, and a generalist counselor will be hired for student guidance, at a much lower cost than an administrative fee Havasi's.

Jim Bolinger's duties, formerly as head of student activities, have been assumed by Mary Braun, who is also with Union building manager.

David Skobon, director of student administrative services, will also serve as athletic director until June 30, 1980. Skobon will assume new administrative duties in Student Services July 1, 1980.

"Student Services was folded with two choices," said Umer. "We could have expanded the staff, or look at present structures and realign to free some money."

One result of this realignment will be the hiring of two additional employees for Financial Aid in January.

Financial Aid, Registration and Admissions will report to the Dean of Faculty effective April 2, 1980, under an authorization from Chancellor Joseph Giusti. Giusti's approval of the change followed recommendations made by Umer upon completion of his study.

"I put the review together to recommend changes to meet new needs in Student Services," said Umer. "When I saw different needs, I told the chancellor I had a plan to restructure Student Services to fund those needs."

In addition to shifting these three areas to the department, Umer has also realigned job responsibilities within his department. (See related story).

Umer listed increased demands in Financial Aid due to new federal regulations, the need for another full-time registered nurse for Health Services, and developing long-stopped student programs as the pressing concerns that weighed in his study. By shifting the three areas of registration, admissions, and financial aid out of Student Services and by realigning duties of his staff, Umer hopes to free up enough money to meet the new needs.

Umer, Giusti, Vice-Chancellor for Financial Affairs James Thatcher all concurred that typically the three areas report to the Dean of Faculty. Giusti said the move is part of a national trend which has realigned similar administrative shifts at Cornell University, the University of Chicago and others.

Faculty members here also strongly support the move, according to Giusti and Umer. Both pointed out that the faculty services recommended in 1975 that these areas report to the Dean of Faculty. Former Chancellor Donald Schwartz, however, chose to locate financial aid, registration and admissions within Student Services, apparently because he thought they had functioned well, said Umer.

"There is a feeling that somehow these units will be more responsive to the academic departments if they report to the Deans of faculty," said Umer.

"That's their prerogative, the faculty's, right or wrong," he said.

Fund-raising plans to be coordinated

By NANCY ROSENHAIN
Chancellor Joseph Giusti is spearheading a program to coordinate IPFW fund-raising activities. At this time, the program is still in the early stages of development.

Giusti's program will seek to establish an orderly method of raising money for areas not covered by appropriated funds. The administration is attempting to establish procedures for determining university-wide priorities for major items, such as a swimming pool for the new recreation building, lecture series, library acquisitions or special laboratories.

Any new procedure, however, would still go through the normal university channels — department chairpersons, deans and coordinators.

The new fundraising program will not include restricted gifts for specific items, that organization, agency, or individual might wish to donate. It will not alter university policy on grantmanship.

The program's primary goal will be coordinating major project efforts and fully utilizing the resources of the Office of Sponsored Research and Development. This office will support developing fund-raising strategies and preparing proposals to determine funding sources.

Learn, shop at the Mall

By KIM MARTIN
Soon, IPFW will be the second school in the state to offer classes at a local shopping mall, explained Ken Balhaizer, director of "Learn and Shop."

Balhaizer said that the first such program in Indiana was developed by Indiana-Purdue University at Indianapolis (IUPUI).

The program in Indianapolis is so successful almost all of the malls there are being utilized, he said.

Southwest Mall was chosen for the local experiment, he said, because it is the largest mall situated furthest from the main IPFW campus. Most of the public's response has been from people who live on the south side of the city.

The shopping mall setting is important because many people find more comfortable in a mall than in a regular classroom setting, he explained. They feel more at home in familiar surroundings. He noted that many may also prefer the close proximity of the mall to their homes.

Even if a building was constructed to feel from the mall, some people might be discouraged, Balhaizer admitted. That's why the location of the classes within the mall is very important.

The program, officially entitled "Learn and Shop," will be taught by full-time faculty members, a fact that Balhaizer feels is a strong point of the program.

A wide range of introductory courses will be offered at the mall, Balhaizer said. Some will be career related courses, but many will be general. Courses such as music appreciation, supervision and introduction to philosophy will be offered next semester.

After the first semester, Balhaizer said, the university will be able to see what the major interest areas are, and plan future course offerings accordingly.

He stressed the fact that the shopping mall school will allow people an opportunity to get started in a college program, but no advanced courses will be offered. There are no plans, nor will there ever be, to offer a degree program at the mall, he said.

The mall school will offer a chance for many people to try college who might be weary of entering the main IPFW campus. Hopefully, he said, this will get many new students, who start at the mall school, to later enter the main IPFW campus. According to Balhaizer, IUPUI has had a lot of success in people transferring from the mall school to the larger campus. After they get some experience and confidence, many of the mall students enter the university with a full-time load. The average time, he explained, is about a year-and-a-half before the transfer is made.

Most of the students are expected to be "house-makers," Balhaizer said. However, in classes such as supervision, a lot of male participation is expected.

"Learn and Shop" is an experiment, he concluded, to give the university some idea of what the university can do to help offer a higher education to more area people.

Those interested in "Learn and Shop" may contact Balhaizer at the Learning Resource Center.

Schaaf defends snow removal

By DEBBIE GRIMM
During past winter, disabled students have complained about snow removal at the men of the Physical Plant.

"There are days when handicapped students just shouldn't come to the campus," said Dick Schaaf, director of buildings and grounds.

Schaaf believes his men responsible for snow removal are doing their best. "I'd like anyone to go to any shopping center and find a job better done."

Debbie Grimm, student services and counselor for disabled students, has suggested that Schaaf use work-study students who are not posted to other departments to assist in removing snow from walkways and ramps before building openings.

"If Debbie Grimm has all the answers, maybe she should be over here (at the Physical Plant)," Schaaf replied to that suggestion. Schaaf said he would have initially kept work-study students busy before the snow began, pointing out that Physical Plant employees are now preparing lawn mowers for next spring. Schaaf also questioned the availability of work-study students who might be in class when snow does accumulate.

"Debbie Grimm just doesn't get the answer she needs," Schaaf said.

What people fail to realize is that the Physical Plant workers have three priorities to meet, Schaaf said. Rushing to clear the campus must be deferred first, followed by parking lots, with sidewalks cleared and paved last.

The workers use three materials after plowing to clear sidewalks and parking lots. Besides sand mixed with salt, fertilizer "ice melter," a calcium based product, are used. The "ice melter" melts ice at a much lower temperature than salt, which is ineffective below 20 degrees. The calcium based "ice melter" however is much more expensive than salt, Schaaf said.

"The snow removal crew must begin work before cars enter the campus, with plowing and rolling beginning at 6:00 a.m. Most removal must be completed before seven a.m., before students arrive for morning classes. But that will be very difficult with the new weekend outdoor classes and night time traffic," Schaaf said.

PR Director soon hired

Writes proposals from all three university relations director candidates are expected this week, to be followed soon by Chancellor Joseph Giusti's final decision and hiring of the director.

The search and screen committee and Giusti requested that the final three candidates, Bruce Atkinson of Presbyterian State College; Jerry Morgan, M.D., of Auburn University at Montgomery; and Richard Morrison of the University of Miami (Fla.), write proposals of how they would implement university relations at IPFW. The candidates have been interviewed by a consulting chair by D. F. Koworevsky, chief vice-chancellor for university relations. This committee is not a formal committee however, according to Giusti.

"I wanted to seek advice from all campus areas and accept their recommendations." Giusti said. Giusti said that Morrison had already sent his written proposal for a model university relations program. He has not been received as of Dec. 7 from Atkinson and Morrison.

If one of the proposals are acceptable, the final decision would not take very long, Giusti said. The hiring of the new director would mean the end of the "writing proposal, he said, and also a microscopic look at whether the candidate is the right person at this time.

The final three candidates came from an initial field of 46 applicants. Carl Sandquist, present director of university relations, has agreed to hold the post until the new director is chosen. At that point, he will retire and continue as a university development consultant.

PROBLEMS AND SOLUTIONS
Have such inventions and technologies been developed as solutions to problems that nature creates for the human race? This is an ancient and ancient idea, which we can restate in the words of the old and familiar proverb, "Necessity is the mother of invention."
We do not know if it is or not, or if it merely explains the origin of technology. The late geographer Carl Sauer has classic study, "Agricultural Origins and Dispersals," argued that leisure may have been necessary for the discovery leading to plant domestication: "The needy and miserable societies are not inventive, for they lack the leisure for reflection, experimentation, and discussion." One might think that the wheel would be an excellent example of necessity being the mother of invention, but it was not known as a technological device in the New World before Columbus.

Since ancient times, people exploiting the earth's resources have tried to interpret what they have done and have often philosophized about it. Such interpretations go back in China at least to the time of Mencius (4th and 3rd centuries B.C.) and in Greece to Plato (5th-4th centuries, B.C.). Both men were interested in the effects of deforestation. In the last two centuries an enormous literature covering many parts of the world has come to light regarding these environmental changes through various technologies, simple and complex; it has been slowly accumulating since antiquity.

CONFLICTING VIEWS
Our conclusions regarding nature and technology depend partly on how we look at history. If we study the history of technology, we are apt to be impressed by inventions, successes and failures, anticipations, improvements, and applications. Our perspectives would be different were we to study the history of the modification of the earth by human beings and their technologies.
The first view of history is likely to show purpose and rational acts based on theory or experience; the second, to uncover unforeseen consequences of human activity into the natural world.
In our times, we are seeing a dramatic meeting of these historic and often opposing streams of thought: (1) an optimistic belief that science and technology, through directed and rational change of physical and organic nature, can manage the environment for continuing human use indefinitely, and (2) a pessimistic view based on an organic conception of nature whose delicate balances can easily be destroyed by humans with only partial knowledge of extremely complex interrelationships in nature.

Hints of this second, or ecological, viewpoint (the "ecosystem concept") appear in antiquity, but the significant developments began in the last years of the 19th century. Its outstanding contribution is the stress on the interrelationships in nature.
In an 18th century example, farmers killed birds because they ate the fruit in their orchards; they later regretted doing so because insects quickly multiplied. It is this concept that makes possible a deeper understanding of the effects of pollutants, plant and animal extinctions, deforestation, the use of fire, soil erosion, and other massive transformations of nature.
The mosaic pattern of the earth, with its physical, biological, and human elements and the distributions of simple and complex technologies, ancient and modern, have made nature the crucial pivot in the relationship of human cultures; now give little evidence of becoming homogeneous.
On the contrary, people wish to keep their cultures, traditions, religions, languages, arts and literatures. Many of these are intimately concerned with their attitudes toward their natural surroundings and toward their tools, whether they are computers or digging sticks.
This means a complex worldwide diversity of attitudes both toward nature and toward technology. They have now become key elements in the fabric of the earth and of its peoples.

Writers needed
The Communicator staff is filling up but we still have room for interested students. We can use essays, concert, and book reviewers. We would like students interested in and aware of political and current issues to write news analysis, business majors or people interested in sales can earn money in their spare time by selling advertising for the Communicator.
The long boring winter months are approaching. Combat the chilly tedium of January, February, and March by starting on the Communicator staff. By trying you will be experiencing the warm glow of satisfaction that comes from seeing your words in print.

Come to room 215 of the Walb Memorial Union Building and talk to us about it, or fill out the following coupon and drop it in the mail.

'Tramp' quits road

Stashley News Service

Supertamp may again play another year again.

That prediction came this week from the group's bass player Doug Thompson. Speaking in London before the start of their series of European concerts over the next two months, he said that seven years on the road was "more than enough." A major change in itinerary is now being considered by group members, who are thinking of moving away from their homes in Los Angeles.

"It has not been a good year to be here," said Thompson. "With the bad air pollution and trash from California is certainly a paradise anymore." The group has not been back to their native Great Britain for more than two years, but Doug said they are now considering a move to London. After finishing their European tour this autumn, Supertamp will start mixing and producing some of the live concert tapes they have already recorded in the States.

Doug said, "I think we sound better on the road than on record, so they should be interesting."

The band claims they have a lot of material that has not yet been recorded, and they are ready to go into the studio and record a new album as well.

"We have a great deal of new music left in us," Doug said. However he does not rule out the possibility that several members of the band will start making solo albums over the next couple of years. That is the natural progression, he said, but the band will stay together.

Collection is superb

By NICK STANGER
A superb collection of fine early American oil paintings is currently on display at the Fort Wayne Museum of Art, located at 120 West Wayne Street. The exhibit, entitled "American Paintings: The Landon Collection" is certainly one of the most outstanding ever brought to the Fort Wayne area.

The paintings are of great historical and artistic value, as they cover a worthy cross section of American art from the 18th century through the early 20th century. Over 40 paintings are on display, created by respected masters such as Benjamin West, Gilbert Stuart, Mather Brown, John Singleton Copley, Joshua Sloss, John Neagle, Christian Schwaner, Winshaw Homer, Thomas Moran, John George Brown, and Oskar Reus.

The style of these noted artists, along with their strict attention to detail, color, and composition make these paintings masterpieces and incomparable to modern-day set forms.

An exhibit such as this has to be seen in order to truly appreciate its striking beauty. It is not an appealing, professional atmosphere, as are all of the displays at the museum. Along with the paintings, a number of pieces of furniture, also original created during the same period, are displayed among the works. The two types of creations complement each other and allow the viewer to absorb himself even more in the exhibit.

This is probably the closest Fort Wayne will ever come to the Chicago Institute of Art, and it is well worth your time to see. One doesn't have to be an art critic or historian to find the magic in these paintings.

Admission to the museum is free. The exhibit, on display through Dec. 30, was organized by the Mint Museum of Charlotte, North Carolina. It is open to the public on weekends and weekday afternoons.

Dental Clinic

Hygienists keep busy

By DEBBIE CANTWELL
Carole Baber is no stranger to the IPFW Dental Hygiene Clinic.

But the student's involvement with the clinic is only beginning. She entered the three-year dental program here.

Baber's parents brought her, along with her brothers and sisters, to the clinic when they were children. There are 11 members in the Baber family and now the clinic cut down on dental bills, the explanation.

It was during those visits

Baber decided she wanted to become a dental hygienist, and things according to her plan, she will be a practicing hygienist upon graduation next May.

In the meantime, Baber has to work on 25 patients in the clinic. This year, successfully complete her national board exams in March and take a practical exam at the school of Dentistry in Indianapolis in June. She admits the exams scare her a little bit, but the clinic work is keeping her busy enough to target the exams for study.

Although she personally has enough patients on which to practice, there are other dental hygiene students who do not. There are good reasons, especially for the students, to volunteer, stressed Baber.

"Prices are the good thing about the clinic," she said. Prognosis or having one's teeth cleaned, is six dollars for adults and four dollars for children. Fluoride treatments are one dollar extra and the cost of X-rays is included in the patient's private dental.

"At the clinic," Baber adds, "we can do a more thorough exam than what a dentist will usually do. And the hygienists, by the way, are under the supervision of practicing dentists from the community."

Plan on making at least two visits to the clinic—only one if you've had your teeth cleaned or visited the clinic recently—only take about two hours. Clinic hours this semester are: 8 a.m.-noon on Mondays and Wednesdays, 1 p.m.-5 p.m. on Tues., and 8 p.m.-11 p.m. on Thursdays. The clinic is open on Wednesdays.

Satisfied customers have become the best form of advertisement for the clinic in its 10 years of existence. "It's by referral that we get many patients," stated Gerald Hibel, supervisor of dental hygiene.

The clinic recently began serving a special group of patients referred to them by St. Mary's Catholic Church-Vietnam veterans. "This is an attempt to take care of one of the refugees' aspects of health care," explained Karen Yoder, regional consultant for community dental health for the State Board of Health, who is also a lecturer at IPFW.

Yoder says the Vietnamese patients may present a problem for the student hygienists. Many refugees speak little English, and hygienists have to deal with the language barrier.

"The IPFW dental hygiene students certainly learn busy with the addition of these new patients," but Hibel says they "can always use patients."

Thus, this reporter recently stretched out comfortably in a dental chair.

"Open just a little wider," Baber loudly reminded for the hundreds time. There was no language barrier.

Couple leave tribe to study

By KIM MARTIN
Blood sacrifice, spiritual medicine, and ancient superstitions are just a few of the things that confront two IPFW students every day.

Mark and Rachel Steffens are full-time students here in a one-year leave from their missionary work in the Republic of the Philippines. They have spent five years in the Philippines, three of those in a remote tribal village in northern Luzon among the Adasen people.

The goal of their missionary service, they explained, is not to push the natives into their way of thinking, but to make the choice available to them. They emphasized they felt it was their duty to make the message of Christianity an option to the Adasen people.

Four years of extensive studies predicted the missionary journey, including everything from language and linguistics to anthropology.

The Steffens represent an organization known as the "New Tribes Mission." This non-denominational group is funded by interested individuals and churches. The organization, which now has about 1,400 missionaries active in various areas, is basically concerned with ethnic minority groups that aren't usually reached by the church.

Near Manila, the couple spent over a year studying the national language and culture of the Philippines before entering the isolated village. They were the first Western people to move into the Adasen village to live. Even after entering the village, it took over a year before they could communicate well enough in the Adasen language to teach.

Rachel Steffens described the Adasen people as fearful, superstitious, and simple, but well-adapted and ingenious too. While not admiring the Adasen people for their ability to survive in their environment, she added that the Adasen show a great eagerness to know about the outside world. For example, many are incredulous to learn that the world isn't flat.

The Steffens noted that the missionary field has changed in the past 20 years or so. It's no longer the missionary's objective to completely change the people they work with and teach. The villagers are approached as intelligent people, whose culture is respected. The tribe members who choose to follow the Christian beliefs are left to decide for themselves how and when they want to worship.

The initial reaction from the Adasen people has mainly been one of suspicion, she continued. They suspected the Steffens of sinister motives, probably because no foreigners had previously entered the area just to help the people. So far, 16 of the 126 villagers have accepted Christianity. While the Steffens are on leave, another family has moved into the village and begun the tedious process of learning the Adasen language. This will allow the Steffens more time to gain their major task of translating the Bible into Adasen, while the new family relieves them of some of the teaching.

However, the Steffens are even more vital to the community. Both Mark and Rachel have permits to give medical services to the people. Rachel said that these two years they have been in the village, no tribal children have died since they've been gone. Three village children have died.

The Steffens said that they enjoy living among the Adasen people. Their two children get along well with the tribal children, and are taught in the Adasen language, as well as English. Carefully, the Steffens are taking courses they feel will help them in their work in the Philippines.

Grades can be appealed

December 13, 1979 - The Communicator - Page 8

Students with complaints about grades can follow a procedure to appeal their cases.

The Student Affairs Committee is currently working on a uniform appeal policy for all departments. Once the procedure is completed, students who believe evidence exists to show that an inappropriate grade has been assigned may file an appeal, copy or other improper conditions such as mechanical error should use following procedure to appeal. Students may also challenge the reduction of a grade or alleged academic dishonesty. When appealing a grade, the burden of proof in writing falls on the student, except in the case of alleged academic dishonesty, when the instructor must support the allegation in writing.

Informal conference attempts must be made to resolve grade grievances and appeal at the lowest level.

1) Course instructor — if the grievance in question is not resolved at this level, the student should seek counsel at the next level.

2) Department chairperson — appeals at this level will be heard either by departmental committee or mediated directly by department chairperson. If still unable to resolve at this level should be referred to:

3) School/Divisional Dean or Coordinator — informal school/divisional boards or committees may be established to meet demands of students. Mediating students' grievances and appeals from this level should be directed to the 14) Office of the Vice-Chancellor and Dean of Faculty. The Vice-Chancellor will ultimately make the final written decision. If dissatisfied, grade appeals reaching this office. After ascertaining that all previous levels of appeal have been duly followed by all parties involved.

Beat Concordia Tuskers get 2nd win

By GARY BAUMGARTNER
The Tusker hardcourt squad gained their second win of the young season as they defeated a feisty Concordia squad, 89-77. However, the cagers fell to a 2-4 start on the week, first to Colling, 84-6, on Tuesday, then to Marion, 96-77, Friday night.

Ty Casey led the Tusk scoring against Albion as he was for 18 points in the first half. Casey sprang an unlikely rebound for a further scoring punch for the Tuskers. Curtis Hoover paced up the slack of Casey's absence, hitting on five field goals for 19 points in the second half.

The Tuskers committed 27 errors in the contest. 21 of which were bad passes. On Friday night, the IPFW cagers hosted a powerful Marion squad. Cliff Todd led the Tuskers scoring as he put up 20 points, 14 in the first half. This time, Mike Curtis picked up the slack caused by a still-lazy Ty Casey. He scored 17 points on four field goals and went 3 of 4 at the foul line.

Although not as hot as the Albion game, the Tuskers committed 21 errors against Marion and Greg Silwell led out of the game.

Henry for a win, the Tuskers "traveled" to Concordia on Saturday as guests of the Concordia Knights.

The Knights won the opening tip off but were unable to convert their first shot. Cliff Todd controlled on a 13-footer at the other end of the court, and the Tuskers never trailed in the game.

The Knights were dealt an early blow in the game when their 6'7" center Greg Hoffman went out of the game at the 7:47 mark of the first half, suffering from an injury.

The Tuskers, led by the scoring of Greg Silwell with 19 points, answered a 3-point lead midway through the second half. But the Knights never gave up as they whittled away at the lead with accurate outside shooting and an effective basketball press.

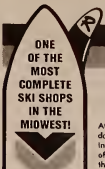

With 1:09 left in the game, Concordia had drawn within eight points of the Tuskers, but a layup by Casey and a 14-foot jumper by Todd finished the scoring for the evening.

Cliff Todd scored 18 points and pulled down 21 rebounds, and Ron Rojnar came off the bench to add 12 points to the cause.

This weekend, the Tuskers will have a home game homebased, as they host Kalamazoo on Friday and a solid Grand squad Saturday. Both games start at 7:30.

Freshman forward Tom Johnson goes for his second of his seven points during the first half of the Concordia game. The Tuskers capitalized on several Kingston turnovers to take an early lead, then outlasted a furious Concordia rally late in the game with 40-27, November 24 in Ron Rojnar. I.M. b-ball changes

Sign-up for intramural basketball will begin on Dec. 17 and run through Jan. 18, 1980. There will be several changes in the format of the league, according to Kelly Clements, intramural director.

The most obvious change will be the hoped for women's division of the league, however, the most significant alteration is the limitation on the number of teams allowed to enter the league.

This year marks the second attempt to form a women's intramural basketball league. A late start and weak publicity crippled last year's organizing effort, but there has been a significant amount of early interest shown for the formation of a women's league this year.

Due to budget cuts and the limited availability of Concordia Gym, it will be necessary to limit the number of intramural basketball teams. Only 24 teams can be guaranteed places in the league, according to Clements. The distribution of playing time between the men's and women's leagues can not be decided until the success of sign-up for both is known. In six-year, intramural teams will be given priority on a first-come basis.

Information on entering intramural events can be found in the Intramural Sports Handbook which can be picked up along with blank team rosters at the Athletic Office, Wall Union, room 210.

Clements is hopeful that these restrictions will not deny anyone the opportunity to participate. However, with 30 teams entered in 1978, and 26 teams last year, and the projected success of the women's league, some teams may be placed on a waiting list. The best advice Clements could give was to "enter your team early and avoid a conflict."

Cagers drop three

By KATHERINE RYZYMINSKI
A lack of experience proved to be the women shooters' downfall in last week's play.

In a home match, the Tuskers were overmatched by Huntington 75-33. The Huntington squad had senior players, an advantage IPFW did not have. Anne McClenghen scored 18 for the Tuskers. The team traveled to play in the Gosben clinic over the weekend. The initial half of the Gosben game was a close one, with a halftime score of 20-20 and it was the best defense displayed all season by the Tuskers. The second half proved a different experience, as Gosben's experience and IPFW's point overdeveloped IPFW. The final score was Gosben 41, IPFW 33. Karen Dieksen shot for 11 points. Saturday, the team played St. Mary's, and were defeated 79-41. "They (St. Mary's players) were taking 30-foot shots and making most of them. I felt our defense played a decent game, though. We had three women in double figures," said the Tusker coach, Dianne Knuth. Anne Klappradic scored 14, Anne McClenghen had 13, and Kim Heiman was good for 12 points for the losers. The final game before the holiday break is a revenge match against St. Francis. It will be played at Concordia Seminary on Dec. 15 at 5 p.m.

The squad, many who were also on the state title volleyball team, will take a two-week Christmas vacation

Giant, Shawareb top tournaments

Kirk Giant won the annual intramural pool tournament, and Hunter Shawareb took the top spot in the ping pong series, both held last Sunday in the Wall Union pool room.

Giant defeated Eric Carpio in the final match to take top honors, after defeating Bob Gerding in the semi-finals and Chris Taylor in the quarter-finals to gain the top berth in the right-hand pool match. Carpio advanced through the preliminaries with victories over Terry Holmquist in the semi-finals and Dave Hartz in the quarter-finals. Also making it to the quarter-finals was Gerald Smiley in the upper bracket and Jennie Whitler in the lower.

Shawareb battled through the early matches of the ping pong tourney with wins over Chris Taylor and Gling Tsang to face Ben Carroll in the final match. Carroll was the winner matches against Terry Holmquist and Truong before falling to Shawareb. Also advancing to the quarter-finals before losing were Steve Clark and Dr. Wen-hui Tsai.

Shawareb and Giant will be awarded plaques for their successful efforts. There were 25 persons competing in each tourney.
